

Smell Identification Tests

This test, also known as the olfactory test, is used to help diagnose patients with problems with their sense of smell. There are 2 types of tests; a quick screening test and a more detailed test which is often used in medicolegal cases in patients with inflammation of their nose caused by exposure to an irritant in their working environment (occupational rhinitis)

